Now That We've Got the Soldiers We've Got to Take Care of Them

Hope's Civilian Military Council reports Friday that after our town propositioned the Army it would take care of any soldiers sent here the Army took us at our word and is preparing a quarter 15,000 men in our vicinity. Biggest job civilians have in quartering troops is providing shower-baths—and that job is being taken care of.

Gravel Haulers Lose Attempt at Wage Hike

Eighty-Three Trucks Halted During Morning Near Blevins

BULLETIN
Truck drivers hauling gravel for the Southwestern Proving Ground resumed work after a half-day strike Friday morning when an attempt to gain a wage increase failed, informed sources said shortly after noon Friday.

The trucks were hired for the contractors by Fred A. Luck who was reported to have settled the attempted strike shortly before noon Friday.

Eighty-three trucks hauling gravel for the Southwestern Proving Ground were halted about two miles south of Blevins early Friday morning, their drivers seeking an increase of 60 cents per load from the Standard Material company of Indianapolis, Ind., contractors. The Star learned.

Drivers of the trucks said they were now getting 60 cents a cubic yard and are asking for an increase of 15 cents a yard to 75c. They said that the contractor was being paid from $1.14 to $1.24 per yard. Each truck holds four yards.

The drivers complained that traffic guards at the Proving Ground would not let them drive over 25 miles per hour, and at this speed they could make only eight or nine trips a day.

None of the drivers, so far as could be learned, belonged to a union. Demands were made known to the Standard Material company headquarters in the Hotel Barlow here.

Russian Army in Retreat

Fall Back to Positions Along the Dnieper River

By the Associated Press
Russian armies apparently are falling back beyond the Dnieper river the next great defense line in the Ukraine, authorized London quarters said Friday, while on the north other Russian troops battled fiercely to check a 3-way German onslaught against Leningrad.

The Russians said Marshall Semon Budenny's army of the southwest had abandoned the Bug river town of Pervomaisk, 115 miles northwest of Nikolayev and Bevo, 100 miles northwest of Nikolayev.

There was no indication that the Nazi columns, storming into the rich grain, iron and industrial province, had yet taken Odessa or the manufacturing city of Nikolayev.

London advices said there was some danger that Russian forces defending Odessa and Nikolayev might be cut off by the German troops advancing toward the industrial center of Dnepropetrovsk at the great bend of the Dnieper river.

Italian military dispatches said that Fascist troops on the southern front had made their first contact with the Russians and were encountering furious resistance.

The Germans claimed that all crossings of the Dnieper river had already fallen to the Nazis but made no detail report of any crossing.

Free Showers in Fair Park for Soldiers

Civilian Council Needs More Public Money to Greet 15,000 Guests

Free showers and other facilities are being set up in Fair park for an expected total of 15,000 soldiers gathering in this city next week for the August maneuvers of the Second Army, the Civilian Military Council announced Friday.

Terrell Cornelius, chairman of the subcommittee on showers and other facilities, said the public shower-baths being set up in Fair park will accommodate 160 men at a time, and will be ready for operation Saturday.

Open 24 Hours a Day
The showers will be available 24 hours a day, and a negro attendant will be on duty. The State Health Department is supervising such sanitary arrangements as providing chemical boxes for the men to step in to kill athlete's foot and other foot infections.

The City of Hope has donated the use of one of the park buildings. It has been cleaned out; a board ramp has been built and an overhead pipe installed with holes drilled in it to create the shower.

The city government has donated the use of a truck, but the Civilian Military Council is paying for labor and much of the pipe being used. Mr. Cornelius pointed out. The work is supported by a public canvassing campaign, which thus far has yielded only $129, while the total need will be $300, Mr. Cornelius said.

Where to Send Checks
He appealed for prompt local support of the financing. Checks may be sent to Cecil Dennis, finance committee chairman, at the Kroger store, or to Ted Jones, vice chairman, at the Western Auto store.

In addition to the provisions for enlisted men, the Boy and Girl Scout cabins in Fair park have been donated as recreational houses for officers. One of the cabins is equipped with showers, and an additional two shower-baths are available to officers beneath the Fair park grandstand. A negro attendant will also be in charge of the officers' quarters.

Army, Police Fix Authority

Gurdon Outbreak Results in Confer- ence at Prescott

The following statement was issued Thursday night from Second Army headquarters at Prescott: "Since the arrival in the maneuver area of the 94th Engineer Battalion (negro), several incidents have occurred between the inhabitants and state police on the one hand and negro troops on the other, culminating in a dispute, this date, on the highway near Gurdon, Ark., between State Police and a detachment of the 94th Engineer Battalion marching from its bivouac position to new bivouac. It had been erroneously reported to the state police that the troops were out of hand, whereas in reality they were under the command of their officers, marching along the road.

"The altercation that ensued was caused by a misunderstanding of authority between local state police and officers in control of the troops. In order to clarify this situation and obviate the possibility of further incidents, Major General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., in command of the Seventh Army Corps, called a conference at Army Headquarters in Prescott with A. J. Albright, Superintendent Arkansas State Police, who came down from Little Rock. "At this conference, all points of difference between military authorities and state police were satisfactorily settled and an agreement made that will obviate any difficulties due to presence of negro troops in this vicinity.

"Except for a slight injury suffered by one negro soldier in an altercation with the police, none of the above-mentioned incidents resulted in either the destruction of property or injury to any individual."

Message to Be Sent to Stalin Reports Say

Nazis Challenge Democracies to 'Come, Get Our Arms'

LONDON —(AP)— President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were reported Friday to be planning to send a communique to Joseph Stalin proposing a meeting in Moscow between Stalin and his war chiefs on one hand and high British and American officials on the other hand.

London sources said the meeting would discuss not only the types of supplies which the U. S. will send to Russia and when they are to be shipped but also the strategic positions of the armies.

The Soviet army in Siberia also will be reviewed. The position of the USSR in the post-war world will be discussed, according to reports, with hopes of some agreement on the sphere and influence of the future.

By the Associated Press
Germany thus challenged Britain and the United States Friday: "If the so-called democracies want Germany unarmed let them come and get our arms."

Authorized quarters in Berlin, scoffing at the "dramatic sea meeting" between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill as a "100 per cent flop," made this comment: "It would be undignified even to discuss Roosevelt and Churchill's eight points."

"We know but one offensive and that is military; We have only one aim and that is the annihilation of the enemy; We have but one taste and that is victory."

"If the so-called democracies want Germany unarmed let them come and get our arms."

"The Nazi defiance was in evident reference to that part of the Roosevelt-Churchill accord which envisioned the disarmament of aggressor nations and the destruction of the Nazis."

Meanwhile diplomatic circles in the capital of the world voiced the opinion that the Atlantic charter would soon produce more startling developments than the peace aims.

County Drive for Aluminum

Collection Cam- paign to Come to Close Saturday

The campaign to collect used aluminum from Hempstead County farm families will come to a climax Saturday August 16. A free pass at the Saenger Theater will be given each 4-H Club member who brings a sack of old aluminum utensils and unused aluminum parts of all sorts, B. W. Chambers and Miss Mary Claude Fletcher, County Extension Agents, announced Friday.

Items desired include pots and pans, radio parts, toys, shakers, screening, old washing machine parts, picture frames, bookends, ice trays, measuring cups, refrigerator plates and electric appliances of all sorts. Anything that is made of aluminum will do, the Extension agents said. The aluminum collected in Hempstead county, with that collected from other counties in Arkansas and other states, will go to smelters to be converted into secondary aluminum. The secondary aluminum will be used to produce defense equipment that does not require as high quality metal as aeroplanes. First class aluminum release by the contribution of the scrap aluminum will all go to the production of defense aeroplanes.

4-H club members throughout the county are urged to bend every effort possible to participate in this worthwhile campaign by bringing a big sack of scrap aluminum to the Saenger Theater Saturday afternoon.

Evils of Modern World More Endurable Is Christ's Sufferings Are Considered
Text: 1 Peter, 4:12-19; 5:6-11

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

When Jesus hung upon the cross, one of the two thieves between whom He was crucified reviled Him, urging Him to save Himself and them. The other thief rebuked his fellow, reminding him they were suffering justly for their misdeeds, whereas Jesus was suffering for His innocency and goodness. The penitent thief had the reward of hearing Jesus say, "This day thou shalt be with me in paradise."

It is this distinction between two kinds of suffering that Peter emphasizes as he writes to encourage suffering Christians who soon found themselves cruelly persecuted. Some of them may have wavered under their sufferings, for suffering inevitably brings a measure of questioning and a sense of mystery. How often one hears people say, "What have I done that I should suffer so?"

Peter reminds these disciples that it is one thing to suffer not having done wrong, and quite another thing to suffer as murderers, thieves, and evildoers. The Christian who suffers is a partaker of the sufferings of Christ, and instead of being ashamed he may glorify God.

Certainly as we observe life, we could not very well say that the happiest and most ideal life is to be entirely free from suffering. We have seen those who have accepted the way of suffering patiently and in subjection to the will of God, ennobled by their experience, finding a deep satisfaction in life often denied to those whose ways have been easier and more pleasant.

I recently published a sermon by a young Illinois minister, the first that he preached to his congregation after a long absence in the hospital as the result of an airplane accident. He had taken up flying in the belief that he might prepare himself for some form of humanitarian service in the present war-torn world. In this sermon he dealt with the preparation for pain, and he brought out some points that were very valuable as they were emphasized in his own experience.

Chief among these was the fact that suffering and pain can be the more easily endured when they are associated with a cause. If, in devotion to some great cause, principle,

LESSONS IN LOVE

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, Barbara spoke to Dugan for the first time in the business deal. They go for a ride with Larry, Barbara's steady, and after Dugan leaves them, Larry tells Barbara that he remembers where he has seen Dugan before—as a football hero in newspaper pictures. He also remembers that Dugan's present name is Indian. Dugan is very slight. Barbara is surprised, and before retiring, she considers the possibility of turning her chair more fully on Dugan to bring Larry around.

PLANNING A CAMPAIGN

CHAPTER VI
BARBARA was awakened the following morning by a violent pounding on her door.

"Hit the deck," a muffled voice said. "You're taking me sight-seeing. Remember!"

It was Dugan, and she remembered then his self-extended invitation of the night before.

"You're crazy," she called sleepily. "It's only 8 o'clock. Come back in three days."

"I'll be back in three minutes with a pail of water," he threatened.

She got dressed. And it was an appreciative eye which Dugan cast over her. From the tip of her blue and pink slippers to the crown of her royal blue picture hat she was the most radiant thing he had seen in New York. Or anywhere, he decided.

"I'll probably spend my time looking at you, rather than the high spots of New York," he said bluntly as they started out in her car.

"Thanks, but you don't deserve all this, you fraud."

"Fraud?"

"Sure. Larry Grover told me a few things Uncle Hank forgot to mention. So you're an Indian, are you? A big, bad, blood-curdling Indian who was going to make me thankful for all those starchless palefaces who haunt my doorstep."

Dugan studied her profile as they drove. There was a grin on his own face as he replied.

"Look, beautiful. I don't disagree with my boss. It was your Uncle Hank's idea, and he insisted on my co-operation."

"Don't think for a minute," he continued, "that I particularly like the idea of providing your social picture with a change of pace. Especially when I was told beforehand that I probably would find you an intolerably spoiled but uncommonly beautiful wench."

She gasped.

"Unquote, Uncle Hank," he grunted, "but I'm inclined to agree."

"And if you must know," he went on evenly, "I'm not a fraud. There IS Indian blood in my veins, and I'm proud of it. A great-grandfather of mine married the daughter of a Pawnee chief. Since then we've stuck to the Irish."

"Then where do you get this Chief Leaping Water business?"

"Strictly on the legitimate. I spent most of my life with Indians. I was practically raised next door to a reservation. . . lived, played, fought with Indian kids. When I graduated from college they inducted me into the tribe as an honorary chief. Now then, if I'm not too objectionable, start showing me the wonders of the modern cliff dwellers."

TEN hours later they were on their way back, the lights of Manhattan in the distance.

"Some island," he mused.

"Not bad for $24 and a string of beads," she observed. "That's what the Dutch gave the Indians for it, you know."

"I know. Typical, wasn't it? The palefaces started trimming them then, and they'd still be at it down in Oklahoma and elsewhere if the government hadn't stepped in to protect their oil lands."

They were quiet for a few moments with only the purr of the powerful motor in the air. Then Barbara broke the silence.

"Well, if we've exhausted the Indian subject, how about some golf tomorrow?"

"Have to be at your uncle's office tomorrow morning, but okay about 2 in the afternoon," he said mechanically. And then in a surprised tone. "Oh, you play golf?"

She bristled. "For your information, I've never played with a man I couldn't beat. Also for your information, I shot in the high 70's and I'll bet you a good ducking in the pool that I beat you."

"I've only played twice this year and I'm a little rusty, but I may be able to make it interesting. It's a date and a bet."

She shot a beautiful 78, but he went her one better with a 77.

"She knew she was licked when her eye followed his opening drive which cleaved the fairway in two, 275 yards down. But what really got her was the manner in which he merely smiled patronizingly every time she made a good shot. Instead of complimenting her, he gave her a superior glance and bettered the shot with his."

"Tell me," she said somewhat petulantly as they walked off the 18th green, "is there no end to your talents? With what am I to be surprised next?"

He guided her to a table unadorned with an umbrella on the clubhouse terrace. "Frankly, I've just about exhausted them," he said with mock seriousness. "There isn't much more I can guarantee. I'm the clean, wholesome, outdoors type, you know. For instance, I've never had a talent with women."

"Too bad," she said cynically. "Nothing you couldn't develop, though, is it?"

"With a little of the proper encouragement, maybe." There was a grin on his face as he said it, but his eye looked straight into hers, and she was the first to lower her gaze.

"Sorry," she said, recovering the slight measure of composure she had lost. "Sorry, but I don't see any forthcoming in the near future."

He made quite a business of examining the glass of lemonade he held in his hand. "I didn't really expect any. In fact, I wasn't seeking any at present. You flatter yourself."

She stiffened. He had led her to a neat little trap, and she had tumbled right in.

So he didn't want encouragement, did he? Well, Mister Dugan Blake, she didn't think acting was one of his talents, and that look he had given her indicated he wasn't quite telling the truth!

And then she wondered how she should describe the tingle which the sudden little observation had given her.

At any rate, it would be fun making him change his mind. But just for the fun of it, of course, she told herself.

or in some noble service, a man has suffered, there is a certain exaltation of spirit which bears him up.

Perhaps the most incisive thing pointed out by this young minister-aviator was that life itself may be for all of us a cause. To live well, to endure, to bear up under heavy burdens, has brought a sense of triumph and of the worth of life to many, who might easily have concluded that their experience was destroying everything that made life worthwhile.

Peter brings this philosophy of endurance of suffering into the realm of Christian faith and practice, emphasizing the part of humility and the strength that comes to men through casting all their care upon God.

The mystery of pain has never been solved. We do not know why the innocent suffer with and for the guilty. We do know, however, there is a fellowship in Christ's suffering which has brought to suffering Christians happiness and peace. And that, too, is a mystery.

Harrison in Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Lend-Lease Does a Movie Reverse

HOLLYWOOD — Whenever a student launches a world-wide search for somebody to play an especially desirable role, you can offer odds among your credulous acquaintances that the whole business is just a publicity ploy, and that the casting quest will swing back to Movie-town and end with the "discovery" of a player who had been kept under wraps all the while.

The story of Anna Lee's discovery (for America) is a little different. It was on the level. And there was no publicity about Lewis Milestone's search for a girl to play the frivolous wife of Ronald Colman in "My Life With Caroline." The director wasn't looking for an unknown, especially. He'd have settled for any of half a dozen suitable local stars, but it happened that a spurt in production filled the program of those and many lesser actresses who might have filled the role.

While the director looked and Producer William Hawks fidgeted, the picture was postponed several times. One day Hawks said, "I hear there's an English picture on the lot that's got a cute gal in it. I think it was made a year or so ago but has just been sent over. Why don't you look at it?"

He Found Her

So Milestone saw "A Young Man's Fancy," and came out of the projection room a lot happier. He said that Anna Lee, the star of the film, would be a swell Caroline—if they only could get her over here. An inquiry was cabled to the British studio.

Next morning a puzzling reply was on his desk. It said, "Ask Bob Stevenson, RKO." That was easy because Director Stevenson's office was just a couple of floors above Milestone's. He walked up and asked, "Do you know anything about a girl named Anna Lee, or where she is?"

"Why, yes," said Stevenson. "When I left home this morning she said she was going to transplant some petunias or something in the garden. And she expected to go shopping this afternoon. She's my wife."

And that's how Anna Lee happens to be making her American screen debut. "My Life With Caroline" is completed, but Miss Lee is going on with the career that lapsed after she and Stevenson came to Hollywood.

Hearing her talk, off screen, you'd scarcely believe that Miss Lee is British. No accent. And her rate of speech is approximately that of a lady auctioneer. She rattles on so

Shipwrecked—Far from its base, this German Focke-Wulf Kurler bomber attacked a British convoy—but itself became the prey of an RAF bomber, which shot it down at sea. Arrows show crew struggling in the water, two right, unfolding a collapsible rubber boat.

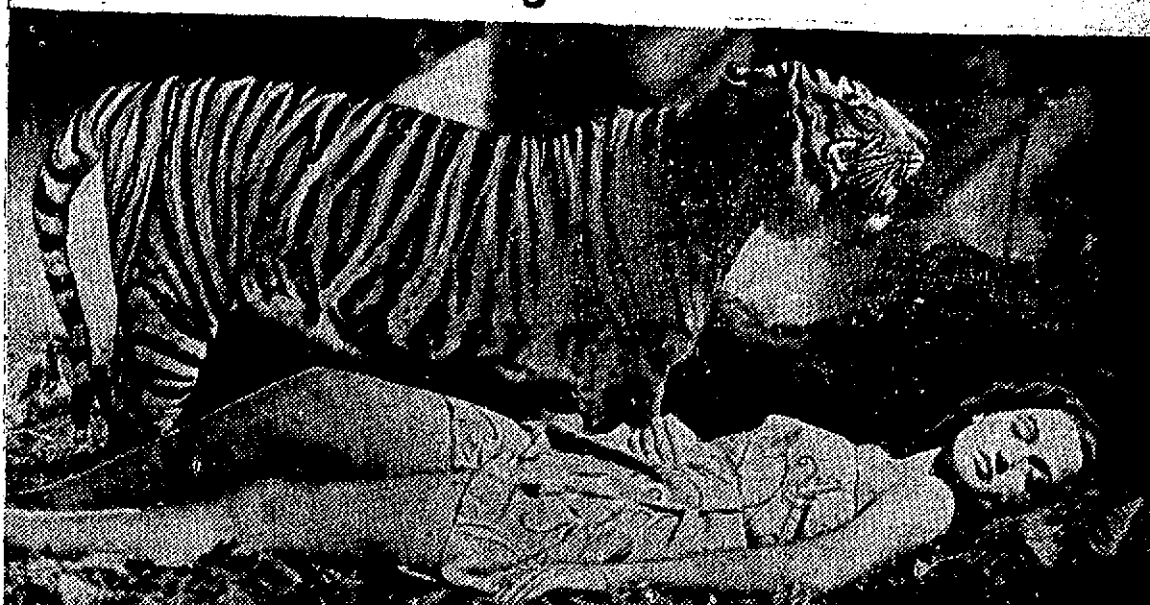

Sighted—Floating helplessly in their emergency craft, the Nazi air-men welcome the appearance of another British warplane which signals them that they will be picked up by boat. Photos were taken from a third RAF Lockheed-Hudson bomber.

Saved—British rescue vessel, directed to the scene, stands by to take on the Germans, hobnobbing about precariously in their little boat.

Mink Is Fur of the Moment

Fox, Wolverine, Ermine Also Are 1941 Favorites

By DEE LOWRANCE
NEA Service Correspondent
sweltering, but the movie stars are out buying furs by the carload. Hollywood has always been fur conscious. Cool nights may be blamed, also a touch of "keeping up with the Joneses." The poorest of extras sport furs, while top stars have closets full.

Stars' tastes dictate Hollywood fur styles. As Willard George, top fur designer, explains it: "Only after the first few weeks of summer does the real style trend emerge. We present all sorts of new styles—the ones that are accepted first set the pace." Movie beauties prefer the full, boxy silhouette this year, according to designer George. Day-length, fitted coats are out. Furs must double for day and evening, for sports or dress wear.

Shoulders are smoothly rounded, with less padding, no sharp squaring. Bell sleeves are sport, cuffs a new note. Necklines sport small collars; if collarless, they are built up to cling close to the throat. All lengths are good—from the briefest of boleros to full-length for evening—chiefly in capes.

As for the furs themselves, mink is the most popular. Anything that looks like mink follows—Jap mink, China mink, Manchurian mink, kolinsky. White ermine, dyed cocoa, a dead issue until now, has suddenly blossomed forth. But real mink is the real story.

When Lucille Ball needed a new fur, she chose mink, picking a finger-length, with a built-up neckline, huge bell sleeves, and a full cut. But the star of "Look Who's Laughing," almost substituted another mink instead, for she liked the way the sleeves of that one were lined to the elbow and could be turned back as cuffs for evening.

In spite of the march towards mink, the fox family is beloved still. Women demand fox, especially in short jackets. Silver fox is first, blue fox second, cross fox third (you should see Lupe Velez's cross fox stole). Ruby-dyed fox has replaced last year's platinum.

Wolverine For Younger Set

For sports and for young things, watch wolverine. College girls like it—lovely to look at and so sturdy—excellent in swaggy coats. Jane Wyatt, now starring in "Weekend for Three," couldn't resist a wrist-length wolverine in shaded skins. She plans to wear it for evening as well as sports.

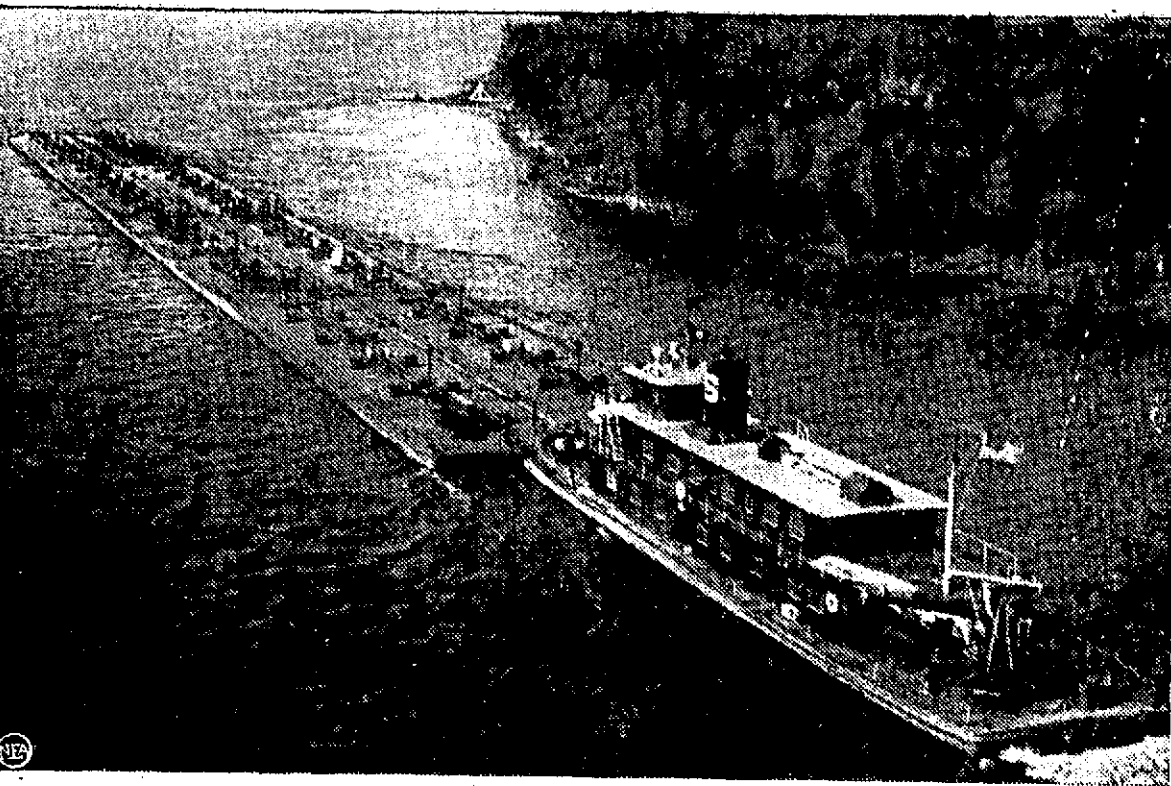

Beaver is another young favorite. But it gets more expensive by the minute, due to the war and the big demand. Mouton is coming up, taking the slack of the beaver demand, particularly with the "teen stars."

For evening, jackets and capes are the thing—there are very, very few long coats. White ermine is the leader. The secret here is the way the skins are worked—as intricately as fine fabrics. The rounded, skillfully worked front panels, repeated in the tie-scarf, of a white wrist-length ermine jacket so bewitched Joan Fontaine that she bought it without even asking the price.

Joan can afford to be forgetful. She got a nice lump of spending money as the star of "Before the Fact."

High styles in fur are the story above. But you'll never cure Hollywood of its worst style habit—wearing furs over slacks.

River Barges Form "Rescue Fleet" to Aid the Gasoline-Hungry East

The Diesel towboat, St. Paul Socony, passing Chain of Rocks, above St. Louis, en route to Pittsburgh, pushing its recent record low of 10,000 tons of gasoline. The tow, composed of eight barges, was two and a half blocks long.

By NEA Service
PITTSBURGH — River barges which in recent years have placidly plied the muddy waters of the Mississippi in fewer and fewer numbers now are pouring oil from rich Gulf Coast oil fields on the troubled transportation problem of the East.

While unmoved oil accumulates in the Southwest for lack of coastwise ships, the U. S. has turned to its vast inland water-ways system for the answer. Towboats and tank barges are taking petroleum products from Texas, through the Intracoastal Canal, up the Mississippi, through the upper Ohio Valley here to Pittsburgh, thence to help solve the looming oil shortage of the Northeastern

REA Gets Set to Do a Job for Defense

WASHINGTON — It looked for a time as though the now vast and still growing Rural Electrification Administration might be sacrificed in the interests of national defense, but by dint of some close figuring, plus a slight shift in the objectives of the REA job to tie it in more closely with defense, the $100 million appropriation for this fiscal year will all be used.

REA's main problem has been to get an allocation of metal. REA lines are now about half aluminum and half copper. Aluminum is out for the duration, but it is a safe bet now that REA will get the 75,000 tons of steel and the 67,000 tons of copper for 305,000 miles of wire, the 3000 tons of zinc needed for galvanizing pole top and guy assembly units, the 5000 tons of porcelain for insulators, and timber for the two million poles that will be needed to carry the program into the fall of 1942.

You might not think that the expansion of a rural electrification program had anything to do with national defense, but REA fits into the picture like this:

First, a big campaign is on to prove that "food will win the war." Anything that helps in the production of food, helps win the war. Electrification of farms helps increase the production of food. Electrification of farms helps increase the production of food. Electrification of farms helps increase the production of food.

and Middle Atlantic states.

Longest River Tugboat Trip On Record

The Diesel towboat St. Paul Socony is an example. It recently made what is probably the longest trip on record for a river towboat making one delivery when it traveled 4137 miles from Minneapolis to Beaumont, Tex., and back here with a cargo of petroleum. But barges from Texas usually travel through the Intracoastal Canal to the Mississippi, where they're taken up by another boat, then again transferred to still another anywhere from Memphis to Wheeling, W. Va.

Although barge traffic and oil cargoes on the waterways have immeasurably increased, if a proposed program goes through, the Mississippi will really become Oil Man River. The Mississippi River System Carriers Association is making a survey for the OPM of all floating equipment to determine how river towboats can best aid in relieving the oil shortage in the East.

Barge building capacity is at present being fully utilized. But that capacity is only seven barges a month, and only 22 Mississippi River barges are under construction. There are two answers to this problem—additional yards could be provided, if barge and towboat builders receive priority on steel and other material, and barges used in the past for other cargo could be converted into tankers. A number of barge owners have already asked the government's permission to do the latter. A bill pending in the house would help finance new river boats and barges.

Rivermen point out that there will be much less opportunity for sabotage if petroleum shipments are carried by rivers rather than concentrated in pipelines that would have to be patrolled continuously. Even more important, they emphasize, is the fact that new barges could be built far sooner, with government aid, than pipelines could be completed. Pipelines, too, require a large percentage of vital steel. Each river unit could go immediately into service, while the completion of an entire project would be necessary in the case of pipelines.

New Barges Carry 1000 Tons

The size of tows used in moving gasoline and other commodities varies. Oil barges having a capacity of from 500 to 600 tons are most numerous in the oil-carrying trade. But most new barges have a capacity of approximately 1000 tons. A towboat may move 10 or more of these at one time on the lower Mississippi. A record tow of 10,000 tons, or 3,500,000 gallons, of gasoline—equal to 400 average tank cars—was moved over the Chain of Rocks, bottleneck of the upper Mississippi River, this spring by the St. Paul Socony. The boat and tow of eight barges measured 927 feet, the length of two and one-half city blocks, or a parade of five old-time freight packets.

fore helps win the war.

Second, there is a shortage of power, particularly in some regions. REA figures that by taking a good part of its appropriation and putting it into steam or diesel generating stations, strategically located, it can alleviate this power shortage. Then, when the war is over, these power stations will be available to feed into new rural distribution systems until the country is covered.

Urbanites Attention

For dumb city fellers, and for boys who left the farm before this wonderful age of rural electrification began, it may have to be explained how this juice is used. Take dairy products, for which there is now an extra demand from Britain: Electricity runs the milking machines, water pumps for the stock, separators and refrigerator systems to keep the milk from spoiling.

Take poultry: A farmer who doesn't have electric lights in the hen houses,

Mind Your Manners

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Is it good manners for a person to spread his bundles over an empty seat in a street car or bus?
2. If a child is too young to pay street car fare, should he be held on the lap of the grown-up accompanying him if the car becomes so crowded there are persons standing in the aisles?
3. When riding in another person's car should you make suggestions as to the route?
4. If a husband and wife are entertaining friends at dinner in a restaurant, should the hostess let the host give all the orders to the waiter?

5. Should one playing tennis on a clay court be sure that his shoes have smooth rubber soles and no lift at the heel?
- What would you do if—
You are playing golf with others and your game is not as good as theirs—
(a) Keep making excuses for your poor playing?
(b) Do the best you can and don't alibi?

POWER, SPEED AND "CULTI-VISION"

Rubber tires and a comfortable seat are standard equipment on Farmall-A, shown here with the Farmall Mower.

McCORMICK-DEERING FARMALL-A

For real tractor value you can't beat the new Farmall-A. Remember . . . it is a 4-cylinder tractor and it sells at a new low Farmall price. It's got all the features you've been waiting for . . . plus exclusive "Culti-Vision."

"Culti-Vision" gives you a clear view of your work. The rows are always under you and in front of you. You can work closer to the rows without neck craning and body twisting.

Farmall-A brings practical horseless farming to many farms that have been handicapped by obsolete power.

Ask us about Farmall-A and its full line of direct-connected machines. Also, two larger sizes . . . Farmall-H and Farmall-M.
